GW In the News
January 1 – 15, 2008

The Fort Wayne News-Sentinel (1/2) and Star-telegram.com (1/12) mentioned GW’s Institute for Spirituality and Health in an article regarding the link between faith and healing.

Campus Technology (1/1) noted GW’s use of GW Alert, a security communication system.

Canada.com (1/5) noted a GW study regarding the health benefits of cultural programs, including participating in the arts, to the elderly.

Inside Higher Ed (1/7) noted GW’s agreement with the Service Employees International Union.

The Southeast Missourian (1/11) noted a GW study in an article regarding achievement in urban and rural schools.

KLFY, Acadiana’s eyewitness news, (1/14) noted GW’s School of Public Health and Health Policy in an article regarding its support on a new project aimed at reforming health care.

The Richmond Times-Dispatch (1/14) noted the large number of GW graduates who join the Peace Corps.

NBC-4 (1/14) noted a study conducted by GW and D.C.’s HIV/AIDS Administration regarding AIDS rates in the District.

Sean Aday, associate professor of media and public affairs, was quoted in The Hill (1/15) regarding Clinton’s campaign in an article regarding political candidates’ public displays of emotion.

Tyler Anbinder, chair of the department of history and professor of history, was quoted on Inside Higher Ed (1/7) regarding student research in history graduate education from a discussion at the annual meeting of the American Historical Association.

Thomas Blanton, National Security Archive, was quoted on philly.com (1/14) regarding secrecy.

David Brunori, research professor of public policy, was noted in the Baltimore Sun (1/6) for his book Local Tax Policy: a Federalist Perspective and was quoted regarding the downside of reliance on property taxes.
Eric Cline, chair of the department of classical & Semitic language & literature and associate professor of classics, was quoted in the Sydney Morning Herald (1/5) regarding fake discoveries of biblical artifacts.

Lawrence Cunningham, professor of law, was quoted on cfo.com (1/11) regarding the differing approaches between The Financial Accounting Standards Board and the International Accounting Standards Board.

Sheryl Elliott, associate professor of tourism studies, was quoted on The Voice of America (1/8) regarding tourism.

Mark Feldstein, associate professor of media and public affairs, was quoted in The Washington Post (1/10) regarding political reporters.

Julie Germany, research associate, was quoted in ComputerWorld (1/7) and Forbes (1/11) regarding Ron Paul’s e-campaign.

Richard Green, director of the Center for Real Estate and Urban Analysis, director of the Center for Washington Area Studies, and Oliver T. Carr, Jr. Professor of real estate finance, was quoted on blogs.wsj.com (1/2) from his review of the Morris paper on his blog. Leesburg Today of Va., (1/14) quoted him regarding the residential market.

William Halal, professor of information systems and technology management, was quoted in The Washington Post (1/6) regarding what the world will look like in 2030.

Stephen Hess, distinguished research professor of media and public affairs, was quoted in The Boston Globe (1/8) regarding the 2008 presidential campaign.

Elliot Hirshman, chief research officer and professor of psychology, was noted in Inside Higher Ed (1/2) for being named provost and senior vice president for academic affairs at the University of Maryland-Baltimore County.

Peter Hotez, chair of the department of microbiology and professor of microbiology and tropical medicine, was quoted in Science Daily (1/1) regarding common parasitic diseases in the United States. ABC News (1/9) quoted him regarding new autism research.

Orin Kerr, associate professor of law, was quoted in The New York Times (1/7) regarding the use of the Fifth Amendment in cases where a password is required to search the contents of a computer.

Donald Lehman, executive vice president for academic affairs and George Gamow professor of theoretical physics, was a guest on WAMU’s Kojo Namdi Show (1/11) regarding labor rights for part-time professors.

John Logsdon, research professor of political science and international affairs, was quoted on The Boston Globe (1/7) regarding NASA’s busy shuttle schedule for 2008. The freakenomics... blog on nytimes.com (1/11) interviewed him regarding whether space exploration is worth the cost.

Marc Lynch, associate professor of political science and international affairs, was quoted in the Chicago Tribune (1/4) in a New York Times article regarding Al-Jazeera’s handling of a Saudi Arabian rape case. News.yahoo.com (1/4) posted his op-ed regarding U.S.-Iran relations. He was a guest on NPR’s Day to Day (1/10) regarding why President Bush is losing support among leaders in the Middle East.

Jeffrey Rosen, professor of law, wrote a review of Anthony Lewis’s Freedom for the Thought that we Hate, published in The New York Times (1/13).

James Rosenau, University Professor of international affairs, was quoted on GovernmentExecutive.com (1/9) in an article regarding private military industry.

Catherine Ross, professor of law, was quoted in The Washington Times (1/15) in an editorial regarding secularism and the Kurdish national identity.

Stephen Saltzburg, director of the litigation and dispute resolution program and Wallace and Beverley Woodbury University Professor of Law, was quoted on National Public Radio (1/8) regarding the criminal investigation into the CIA’s destruction of videotapes of the interrogation of detainees.

Daniel Solove, associate professor of law, was noted on LandcasterOnline.com (1/12) for his book The Future of Reputation: Gossip, Rumor and Privacy on the Internet and was quoted regarding shame websites.

Stephen Joel Trachtenberg, President Emeritus of the university and university professor of public service, was quoted on GovernmentExecutive.com (1/9) regarding the creation of a U.S. Public Service Academy.

Jonathan Turley, J.B. and Maurice C. Shapiro Professor of Public Service Law, wrote an article for USA Today (1/3) regarding the future of American politics in the new year. News & Observer of N.C., (1/4).

Gayle Wald, professor of English, was noted in the Philadelphia City Paper (1/8) regarding her book, a lively biography of Sister Rosetta Tharpe called Shout, Sister, Shout!

Ron Weitzer, professor of sociology, was quoted in The Press Enterprise of Calif., (1/1) regarding Internet prostitution.