ABOUT THE AUTHOR

PHIL WILLIAMS is Professor of International Security in the Graduate School of Public and International Affairs at the University of Pittsburgh. From 1992 until April 2001, Dr. Williams was the Director of the University’s Matthew B. Ridgway Center for International Security Studies. Professor Williams has published extensively in the field of international security including Crisis Management, (1976) The Senate and US Troops in Europe, (1986) and (with Mike Bowker) Superpower Detente: A Reappraisal (1987). He has edited or co-edited books on the Carter, Reagan, and Bush Presidencies, as well as on Classic Readings in International Relations. During the last 15 years his research has focused primarily on transnational organized crime and he has written articles on various aspects of this subject in Survival, Washington Quarterly, The Bulletin on Narcotics, Scientific American, Crime Law and Social Change, and International Peacekeeping. In addition, Dr. Williams was founding editor of a journal entitled Transnational Organized Crime and has edited several volumes on organized crime.

He has been a consultant to both the United Nations and United States government agencies on organized crime and has also given congressional testimony on the subject. Most recently he has focused on alliances among criminal organization, global and national efforts to combat money laundering, and trends and development in cyber-crime. From 2007 to April 2009, Dr Williams was a visiting research professor at the Strategic Studies Institute, US Army War College, where he worked on organized crime in Iraq and wrote a monograph titled The New Dark Age.
DISCUSSANTS

JOHN T. PICARELLI is a Social Science Analyst for the International Center of the National Institute of Justice. Dr. Picarelli’s research and expertise focus on how different forms of transnational threats overlap. He has published widely on the topics of international organized crime, human trafficking, terrorism and gangs. At NIJ, he is responsible for promoting international research and locating international programs and policies that benefit US criminal justice agencies. He is a member of the faculty at American University and The George Washington University. He received his PhD in international relations from American University in 2007. He is currently working on a book examining the historical roots of modern slavery.

WILLIAM ROSENAU is a political scientist in the Rand Corporation's Washington Office, where he specializes in the study of insurgency, terrorism, intelligence, and military special operations. He is also the chairman of RAND’s Insurgency Board. Dr. Rosenau has served in the US State Department’s counterterrorism office (S/CT); as a congressional legislative assistant; on the US Department of Defense Commission on the Roles and Missions of the Armed Forces (CORM); and in the office of the US assistant secretary of defense for special operations and low-intensity conflict (OASD/SOLIC). He is also an adjunct professor in Georgetown University's Security Studies program. In October he will be joining the research staff of the Center for Naval Analyses.
