Two Years Later: A WikiLeaks Effect?
Part of IERES’ Behind the Headlines Series

with

Philip J. (P.J.) Crowley
Former Assistant Secretary and Spokesman at the Department of State

This presentation offers attendees a chance to hear the perspective of the primary U.S. government interlocutor with major media regarding the release of classified diplomatic cables by Wikileaks. His presentation will examine the extent and impact of Wikileaks, assess where we are two years later, and consider the impact on US diplomacy in Europe and the Middle East.

Philip J. (P.J.) Crowley is the Omar Bradley Chair of Strategic Leadership at Dickinson College, the Penn State Dickinson School of Law and School of International Affairs, and the Army War College. P.J. is also a fellow at the Institute for Public Diplomacy and Global Communication at The George Washington University. He appears frequently as a national security commentator on global television networks, including as a contributor to Al Jazeera English and the BBC. He is also a regular columnist for The Daily Beast. P.J. was nominated by President Obama as the Assistant Secretary of State for Public Affairs in 2009 and confirmed by the United States Senate. He served as the Assistant Secretary and Spokesman at the Department of State until March 2011. Before joining the Obama administration, P.J. was a Senior Fellow at the Center for American Progress, with a particular focus on homeland security in the aftermath of 9/11. During the Clinton administration, P.J. was Special Assistant to the President of the United States for National Security Affairs on the staff of the National Security Council. Crowley spent 26 years in the Air Force, retiring at the rank of colonel in September 1999. He is a veteran of Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm.

Wednesday, April 18, 2012
12:30 – 1:30 pm
Voesar Conference Room
1957 E Street NW, Suite 412
Please RSVP at http://tinyurl.com/CrowleyGWU

This event is on the record
Co-sponsored by the School of Media and Public Affairs