The Need for Global Public Policy in the 21st Century with

Jack A. Goldstone
Hazel Professor of Public Policy, George Mason University

Discussant: Robin J. Lewis, Professor and Director, Master of Global Public Policy (MGPP) Program, Russian Presidential Academy of National Economy and Public Administration (RANEPA)

The 21st-century world presents a host of challenges for the international community. Globalization, climate change, the rise of a global middle class, violent crises in Africa and the Middle East, and the use and proliferation of weapons of mass destruction -- all of these and more call for a global approach to public policy. Professor Goldstone will discuss the major global trends in economics, population, and conflict, and the pivotal role of the BRIC countries in crafting viable solutions. Professor Lewis will also present a brief introduction to the MGPP Program, designed to prepare students to address these global challenges.

Jack A. Goldstone is the Hazel Professor of Public Policy at George Mason University, a non-resident Senior Fellow at the Brookings Institution, and Director of the Research Laboratory on Political Demography and Macro-social Dynamics at RANEPA. Robin J. Lewis is Professor and Director, Master of Global Public Policy Program at the Russian Presidential Academy of National Economy and Public Administration (RANEPA) in Moscow and serves as President of the International Development and Public Policy Alliance (IDPPA).
