Of What Cloth Are the Ties That Bind?
National Identity and Support for the Welfare State across 29 European Countries
Part of IERES’ European Politics Series

with

Matthew Wright
Assistant Professor of Government, American University

Professor Wright is a student of political behavior in the United States and Europe. He has studied the causes and implications of political identity; immigration, assimilation, and citizenship policies; the politics of ethnic diversity; national identity and patriotism; religion and politics; political culture; social capital, civic engagement, and trust, and U.S. voting behavior. Before joining American's University's Department of Government in 2011, Dr. Wright spent one year as a Post-Doctoral Researcher at the Kennedy School of Government, Harvard University. His PhD was awarded by the University of California, Berkeley in 2010. Dr. Wright has published articles in journals such as Political Psychology, Perspectives on Politics, Comparative Political Studies, and American Politics Research.

A copy of Prof. Wright’s paper will be made available to those who RSVP.

Friday, October 12, 2012
12:00-1:30 pm
Voesar Conference Room
1957 E Street, NW, Suite 412
Please RSVP at http://go.gwu.edu/wright

This event is on the record