Marc Morjé Howard is an Associate Professor of Government at Georgetown University. Professor Howard will be speaking at IERES about his most recent book, The Politics of Citizenship in Europe (Cambridge University Press 2009), which received the 2010 Distinguished Book Award from the International Studies Association's organized section on Ethnicity, Nationalism, and Migration. His research addresses a variety of topics related to democracy and democratization, including civil society, immigration and citizenship, hybrid regimes, right-wing extremism, and public opinion. Howard is also the author of The Weakness of Civil Society in Post-Communist Europe (Cambridge University Press 2003), the co-editor, with Vladimir Tismaneanu and Rudra Sil, of World Order After Leninism (University of Washington Press, 2006), and the author of numerous scholarly articles.
